INDEX OF THE PUBLIC ADMINISTRATION QUARTERLY: VOLUMES 1 (JUNE, 1977) THROUGH 14 (WINTER, 1991)

INTRODUCTION

The Public Administration Quarterly originally bore the title Southern Review of Public Administration. The title change occurred with the publication of Volume 7, Number 1, Spring 1983.

Two of the persistent complaints about research in public administration is that it does not cumulate and that it is not utilized often enough by practitioners. Cumulation is essential if public administration is to mature and develop a sound theoretical base. Too often current studies do not build on earlier work on the same topic. As a result, the words "groundbreaking," "new," and "exploratory" are used too often.

Research would be both easier, richer, and more useful if scholars and practitioners were able to "stand on the [proverbial] shoulders of their predecessors." Cumulation can enhance utilization of research as the weight of evidence on a topic accumulates. Unfortunately, access to research in public administration is limited because the journals in the field are either not indexed at all or are not thoroughly indexed. An index is an aid for those who would review the literature and a better starting point than either ignoring the past or relying on serendipity to turn up appropriate materials.

To assign a single subject heading to an article, as some indexes do, may identify a topic or a major focus of an article while ignoring other topics and subtopics. This index contains from 1 to 20 subject headings per article.

This index contains author entries starting on page 4 and subject headings starting on page 51.
